San Francisco (AP) — A vibrant, smiling Patricia Hearst was freed on $15 million bail Friday and went home for the first time since her bizarre kidnapping 33 months ago.

Miss Hearst, looking healthier than she has in the past, appeared at a brief new conference in the Federal Building courthouse where she was convicted of armed bank robbery last March.

Her attorney, Al Johnson, said she would not answer questions "for legal reasons" and then nodded to Miss Hearst to make a statement.

"It would be a lot better if I were home right now. I'd like to get this over with so I can go home," she said. Smiling at reporters, she walked briskly out of the courthouse press room.

The 22-year-old newspaper heiress, who has spent the last 14 months in prison, was released by U.S. District Court Judge William H. Orrick on bail pending appeal of her bank robbery conviction. She also awaits trial in Los Angeles on state charges.

The judge also denied a motion by Miss Hearst's attorneys for a new trial on the bank robbery charge.

Wearing a dark pinstriped vest and a white blouse, Miss Hearst was nervous but bouncy. Federal marshals who drove her from a federal prison in San Diego earlier in the day described her mood as one of elation.

When she was reunited with her parents at the Federal Building, her mother said, "All my prayers are answered."

After the news conference, Miss Hearst was escorted by private security guards to a car caravan. She arrived shortly afterward at her parents' fashionable Nob Hill apartment in downtown San Francisco.

The U.S. attorney who successfully prosecuted Miss Hearst, James Browning, predicted that the conviction would be upheld on subsequent appeals and that Miss Hearst's freedom may not be lasting.

He also said Miss Hearst is expected to testify in prosecutions against her underground associates, but he refused to elaborate.

The order by Judge Orrick, who had sentenced Miss Hearst to seven years in prison, required her father, newspaper executive Randolph Hearst, to deposit $100,000 cash — 10 per cent of the federal bail of $1 million.

On Thursday, the Hearsts put up $500,000 bond in Los Angeles to guarantee Miss Hearst's appearance at her scheduled Jan. 10 trial there on state charges of robbery and kidnapping.

As conditions of her release, Orrick ordered that Miss Hearst live with her parents, that she not leave California without prior approval of the court, that she report by telephone to her probation officer in San Francisco on Monday and Thursday mornings, and that she meet with a probation officer at least once a month.

The judge also ordered that she report in person "to any court where her presence might be required from time to time."

Orrick said the most important question he had to decide in the motion to free Miss Hearst was whether she was a flight risk. Conditions imposed on her release "will reasonably assure that she will not flee," Orrick said.

The heiress' parents, San Francisco Examiner President Hearst and his wife, Catherine, who live in an apartment on fashionable Nob Hill, came to the Federal Building shortly before the order freeing their daughter was filed.

As Miss Hearst left the courthouse to go with her parents to their apartment, she was surrounded by private security guards. A spokesman in the U.S. marshal's office said she would be "100 per cent in the hands" of the privately hired guards.

Miss Hearst won her freedom 33 months after she was dragged half naked and screaming from her Berkeley apartment by the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army. The $10,690 robbery of the Hibernia Bank branch in San Francisco for which she was convicted came 10 weeks after the Feb. 4, 1974, kidnapping.

Debt moratorium declared invalid

(c) New York Times

Albany, N.Y. — The State Court of Appeals declared invalid the year-old moratorium on the repayment of more than a billion dollars worth of short-term New York City notes — thereby throwing out the cornerstone of the financial structure that rescued the city from default and bankruptcy last year. The decision stunned state and city officials who had put together the elaborate rescue, and it immediately plunged the city's finances into the confusion and disarray that they have not experienced since the height of the fiscal crisis in 1975.

U.S. won't stop Angola

United Nations, N.Y. (AP) — The United States reversed its stand Friday and said it would not block U.N. membership for Angola.

The United States vetoed the initial membership application of the Marxist-oriented Angolan government last June 23 because of the continued presence of an estimated 12,000 to 15,000 Cuban troops in that African nation, holdovers from the Angolan civil war.

Curiosity caught him

Tampa, Fla. (AP) — Curiosity landed city garage worker Henry Baker in jail.

Police said Baker was putting gas in officer G. R. Watherspoon's patrol car when he noticed a small black box on the front seat that resembled a portable television with a keyboard.

"What's that?" Baker asked. Watherspoon began explaining the computer system that tells immediately if a person is wanted by police or a car is stolen.

He typed in Baker's name to show him how it worked. A reply came back that Baker was wanted for failure to appear in court on charges of driving without a license. Watherspoon arrested Baker, police said.

Lemoyne (AP) — The body of a Lemoyne man was found Friday in one-room house. Keith County Atty. Pat Hays said an autopsy will be ordered. The name was withheld until relatives are notified.

Hays said the body had been there for some time. It was found by an insurance salesman who knocked on the door and saw the body through a window. No other details were immediately available.

LES revives nuclear power plant option

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

The idea of participation by the Lincoln Electric System (LES) in the Ft. Calhoun No. 2 nuclear power station was revived Friday.

LES board member Keith Newhouse suggested participation in the plant be considered an alternative in a current study of ways to meet future power needs.

The City Council last year turned down a request by LES to participate in the building of the nuclear power plant.

But Newhouse said he was told by City Council Chairman Max Denney that the council's decision on the matter was not cast in concrete.

Newhouse said one of the chief reasons the council turned down the proposal was that no one could say exactly how much money it would have to invest in the plant.

But in the lapse of a year, according to Newhouse, the situation might have changed.

Newhouse, a professor of mechanical engineering at the University of Nebraska, said he believes hazards of nuclear power are "not beyond what we can live with."

A decision on whether to build nuclear power plants, he said, "comes down to an economic decision" on whether that method is more practical than another.

Newhouse teaches nuclear engineering courses and instructed operating personnel for the Hallam and Cooper nuclear generating stations.

In response to Newhouse's suggestion, LES administrator Walt Canney said there might be a question of whether the Nebraska Public Power District would allow LES participation at this time.

Newhouse, however, said the option might be open since construction of the plant has been delayed. Canney agreed to consider the plant as an option if it is possible.

Other alternatives being considered by LES are building a power line to Canada with help from other utilities and LES construction of its own plant northeast of Lincoln.

On another matter Canney told the board LES will seek a 6% rate increase in December.

Some earlier estimates had placed the rate increase higher.

Canney said the lower rate was made possible because LES was able to purchase cheap electricity while the Cooper Nuclear Station was closed for summer refueling.

Those bargains and a shorter shut-down period than expected for the nuclear power station were able to offset the loss of revenue because electricity sales were lower than expected, he said.

Cloud due early today

Washington (AP) — Part of a California-sized radioactive cloud formed by a Chinese nuclear test probably will reach northern Washington state by 6 a.m. CST Saturday, government officials said Friday.

Ground contamination from the cloud depends chiefly on whether there is any weekend rain to bring the radioactive material down from the upper atmosphere, an Environmental Protection Agency spokesman said.

The projections would all be updated publicly through the weekend, he said. Weather patterns Friday indicated a chance of a rainstorm in the Northeast at the time the cloud is passing Saturday night, he said.

Even with rain, U.S. officials don't yet know how strong the radiation would be at ground level, or whether it could be harmful, he said.

An "initial prediction" of the cloud's passage across the United States was issued Friday evening by EPA on the basis of work done by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA).

The central portion of the 160,000-square-mile cloud should travel across the northern United States, the projection said. By 6 a.m. CST Sunday, this center should be over western Pennsylvania.

At that same time Sunday morning, the projection said, the southern boundary of the debris-filled air mass is expected to be over southwest Texas, after moving southeasterly from Oregon.

EPA said that the southern boundary of the cloud was expected to cross over the Atlantic Ocean shoreline at South Carolina Sunday night.

The central portion should have crossed over the New Jersey shore late Sunday morning or early Sunday afternoon, it said.

Dr. W. D. Rowe, EPA's deputy assistant administrator for radiation programs, said that "the most potentially critical pathway to man" for radioactive contamination of this kind is through the milk from cows that have eaten grass in a pasture contaminated by rain-deposited debris.

The radioactive cloud was created by a four-megaton explosion of nuclear material Wednesday in the People's Republic of China, the largest in Chinese history.

Lincoln sprouts bubbling geyser

There was a short-lived geyser Friday morning at a construction site at the northwest corner of 48th and Normal. Water bubbled from a damaged pipe for about a half hour, a public utilities department spokesman said.

Workers digging to put in a service tap accidentally struck a pipe leading to the service station across the street. The water under pressure sprayed ten to twenty feet in the air.

Water was shut off in the area for about an hour while the break was being repaired.

Air Force impresses young cadet

By Patty Boutler
Star Staff Writer

Margaret Simmons is still in high school, but she already knows that military life agrees with her.

Through the Civil Air Patrol (CAP) cadet program, the 17-year-old East High School senior has gotten enough glimpses of Air Force life to know she wants to be part of it.

She wears an Air Force uniform at weekly cadet meetings, studies Air Force leadership manuals and aerospace education materials and is groomed in the etiquette of the flying blue.

"We get a little bit of the Air Force thrown at us all the way through the cadet program," says the four-year member who's been in the Nebraska "wing" two years and was in the South Dakota unit several years before that.

But she's far from complaining. "I'm impressed with what I've seen. The typical teenage view of the military as something to be feared is not correct at all; it's a vital part of today's world," she says.

Margaret initially joined the cadet program because her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Simmons, of 2125 So. 62, were senior CAP members.

She has worked her way up the ranks to cadet-lieutenant colonel and is the highest ranking female in the state.

CAP is always plagued by an overabundance of boys and not enough girls, she says, but Lincoln's 25-member cadet squadron is more balanced than most.

Part of cadet training deals with emergency services, like locating downed aircraft when the Federal Aviation Administration gives up the search. However, Margaret is grateful the squadron doesn't get called into action very often.

Margaret's interest and enthusiasm for CAP were rewarded this summer with a trip to Great Britain as one of 196 young Americans selected for the International Air Cadet Exchange. She visited Royal Air Force bases and flew 2,500 feet above London in gliders piloted by RAF crews.

And in September she attended the CAP national convention in Philadelphia as a north central region representative.

Not all of what CAP has given Margaret can be measured in medals and merits. "It's helped me to handle people effectively — to cooperate and work toward some common goal," she says. Her self-confidence has grown and she says she's much more outgoing both in school and elsewhere.

"I was forced to go out and do things I never thought I could do and found, wow, that they weren't hard at all."

She's also become skilled in the art of persuasion. "You learn to persuade kids to salute because they want to and not because they have to."

Sight of bodies on mine cars sends shock through crowd

Oven Fork, Ky. (AP) — Eleven men who went into the Scotia Coal Co. mine here eight months ago finally came out Friday, wrapped in plastic bags and blankets.

The long wait ended at noon as the bodies of the eight miners and three federal safety inspectors were brought out of the No. 1 mine. About 100 friends and family members looked on as the mine cars rumbled past them.

Many of the relatives had been at the mine since daybreak. Most of them waited calmly, eating sandwiches and drinking coffee provided by the company.

But the sight of the mine cars — draped with yellow plastic sheets — sent a shock through the crowd. Women began moaning, and men covered their eyes to hide their tears.

"Oh God! Oh Jesus!" cried the relatives as the mine cars rumbled past them.

"Why, they're in an old mine car covered with a sheet," said a middle-aged man. "They brought them out just like a load of coal."

"I hope you're happy," screamed a heavy, grey-haired woman who lost a son in the second of two methane gas explosions last spring. "I hope you rot in hell."

Her anguished cry was directed at a group of Scotia officials standing across a man-made gully leading to the mine mouth. A Scotia security guard with a pistol and a walkie-talkie made certain nobody went across the bridge spanning the gully.

The crowd calmed considerably after the bodies were unloaded and taken into a concrete block building about 50 yards from the mine entrance. A small group of relatives then was allowed to cross the bridge and view the bodies, placed on a line on the concrete floor.

"It hurt," said Harvey Sturgill, 27, who identified the body of his father, James Sturgill. "Indeed, there will be a certain relief when it's all over. This is the first step toward finalizing it. It was rather painful."

He said he was near a friend when the mine cars came to the surface.

"There was hysteria kind of sweeping throughout the crowd," he said. "It was a very heavy moment."

Many of the relatives were bitter as they waited for the bodies to be identified.

"We'll never find out what really happened," said a young man whose brother was among the victims. "They've done told us a hundred stories."

The 11 men were killed March 11 in the second of two explosions which ripped through the mine. The first blast, two days before the second, claimed the lives of 15 miners.

Those men were brought out a short time later. The 11 killed in the second blast had gone into the mine to help prepare the mine for inspection, and the mine was sealed after the second explosion. It was finally reopened when the rescue operation began in July.

"Those men were held hostage in there," said the woman who had screamed at the Scotia officials a few moments earlier. "They were kept in there until things could be covered up."

Ray Ross, a federal safety officer who directed the recovery operation, said what sparked the explosions will not be known for weeks. He said the explosion took place about 3,000 feet from where the bodies were found.

"The men were killed by the concussion," he said. "We won't know what caused the explosion until we go further on inside."

Back at the mine mouth, the red-eyed crowd quietly while the bodies were identified. The moaning began anew as they were loaded into ambulances parked beside the concrete building.

"Where are the big shots?" a woman asked as she watched the ambulances pull away. "They should be here with us now. The company don't care."

Officials said all three Scotia mines at Oven Fork would be closed next week to commemorate deaths and to allow the company's 700 employees to tend funerals.

Price rise slows down

Washington (AP) — Inflation continued its cooling trend in October with consumer prices rising only 0.3%, the smallest advance in seven months.

The Labor Department, in its price report Friday, said last month's increase would have been even smaller had it not been for bigger price tags on 1977 model cars, up a seasonally adjusted 1.4%.

There was also good news for the average wage earner, whose paycheck gained added purchasing power for the first time since July.

Real spendable earnings — that is, what's left after deductions for taxes and adjusted for inflation — increased 0.5% in October. However, real earnings were down 0.4% over the year because of higher taxes.

In other economic developments:

The Commerce Department reported the first increase in four months for new orders of durable goods, which could be a sign that industrial production is beginning to pick up.

The Federal Reserve Board dropped the discount rate, the interest rate on loans to member banks from 5.5% to 5.25%, signaling that it is prepared to let interest rates in the economy decline.

The 0.3% rise in October prices was the smallest monthly increase since March when they rose 0.2%. Prices had risen 0.5% a month during June, July and August, and increased 0.4% in September.

Over the past year, retail prices have risen 5.3%, the smallest increase for any 12-month period in 3½ years.

The price report was one of the few bright spots in an otherwise bleak economic picture of high unemployment and curtailed economic growth.

Most of last month's increase in consumer prices reflected higher costs for new cars, gasoline, natural gas, electricity, transportation and some foods.

Food prices rose 0.3% after showing no change in September. Among components of the food price index, grocery prices rose 0.3% and restaurant and snack prices increased 0.1%.

Coffee prices rose last month but not as much as in September, and prices for beef, poultry, eggs and fresh fruits increased after declining the previous month. Pork, sugar and cereal prices declined.

CIA head briefs Carter

Plains, Ga. (AP) — CIA Director George Bush briefed President-elect Jimmy Carter on Friday about "highly sensitive areas that we didn't touch on before" and the secret methods the spy agency uses to gather intelligence around the world.

Although Bush briefed Carter twice during the campaign, he only provided limited information.

"Now President Ford has instructed me not only to provide President-elect Carter with whatever intelligence we've got, but with the ways in which we get intelligence," Bush said.

Vice President-elect Walter F. Mondale also attended the briefing.

Carter and Mondale are to be briefed here Saturday by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Carter plans to meet in Washington on Monday with President Ford, Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns, James T. Lynn, director of the Office of Management and Budget, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, Treasury Secretary William Simon and David Mathews, secretary of health, education and welfare.

Carter is scheduled to meet Tuesday with members of House and Senate foreign affairs committees and with committee chairmen of both bodies. He also has planned a meeting with Republican leaders of the Senate and House.

Jody Powell, Carter's press secretary, said the sessions are intended to provide evidence that Carter is serious in his efforts to develop a bipartisan approach to foreign policy and to Congress back into the foreign policy decision-making process.

Powell also announced that Carter has 11 members of the business, labor, academic, professional communities to an advisory committee that is to be at the core of his efforts to select "the best available talent" to fill Cabinet positions and other high-level government posts.

Named to the council were the Rev. The M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University and former chairman of the Civil Rights League of Women Voters; Lane Kirkpatrick, secretary-treasurer of the AFL-CIO; Vernon Dan, executive director of the Urban League; Carol Foreman, executive director of the summer Federation of America; Marian W. Edelman, a black woman who is executive director of the Children's defense Fund.

Also, Robert Strauss, chairman of Democratic National Committee; Hank LaChapelle, chairman of the Hispanic division of the Mondale campaign; Owen Cooper, a JAC Miss., manufacturer who is the former moderator of the Southern Baptist Convention; I. Uhapiro, chairman of the board of the Business Roundtable and chairman of E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.; and Patricia Roberts Harris, prominent Washington attorney and chairperson of the 1972 Democratic National Convention.

UAW, GM reach agreement

Detroit (AP) — The United Auto Workers and General Motors reached tentative agreement on a national contract Friday, ending what one GM official called the shortest auto strike in industry history.

The three-year pact for GM's 390,000 hourly employees was announced 12½ hours after the union struck 16 key plants, where 80,000 hourly workers walked off the job at midnight Thursday.

The strike followed round-the-clock bargaining that began Thursday morning. Pickets were withdrawn at most of the strike-bound plants soon after the settlement was announced, and local union officials said they were instructing second-shift workers to report to their jobs.

The contract now goes to the rank-and-file, with ratification votes scheduled for the week of Dec. 6. If workers approve the pact, it will settle contract negotiations for the three largest domestic automakers. This year's talks began exactly four months ago Friday.

The industry's pattern contract was set at Ford after a 28-day strike last month, and Chrysler workers ratified a similar agreement on Wednesday.

The union still must negotiate a contract for some 14,000 workers at financially strapped American Motors. No strike deadline has been set for that smallest of the U.S. automakers.

The pact at GM was announced by UAW President Leonard Woodcock, who called it "an excellent settlement."

George B. Morris Jr., GM's top bargainer and the company's labor vice president, said the settlement terms were "inflationary" and would add $5.8 billion to GM's labor cost. But he said he did not know whether it would result in higher car prices.

The average hourly pay for workers was $6.88 under the old contract. Estimates from the company and the union including an anticipated 6% per year cost of living adjustment will bring the hourly pay to about $8.60 per hour at the end of the new contract.

Morris estimated the new agreement would increase labor costs by an average of 33% or $3.75 an hour per worker, by 1979, including projected inflation raises. That would bring the firm's total hourly labor cost for the average worker, including wages and benefits, to more than $15 in the third year, he said.

UAW Vice President Irving Bluestone said the last issue to be resolved concerned a union demand that GM remain neutral on future organizing drives at new GM plants in the South.

The UAW had accused the nation's No. 1 automaker of having a "Southern strategy," under which it held off efforts to unionize the plants in the South. Bluestone said the union won the pledge it wanted in the new contract and added, "We're perfectly satisfied with it."

U.S. State Department edges out Moynihan for Doublespeak Award

(c) New York Times

New York — The Committee on Public Doublespeak of the National Council of Teachers of English has decided to give its Doublespeak Award to the State Department. Daniel P. Moynihan, the Democratic senator-elect from New York, was runner-up.

This year's honor does not go to the State department for duplicitous language in dealing with foreign nations or even with Congress, but rather for the wording of its announcement of plans to appoint a consumer affairs coordinator.

The coordinator, that announcement said, will "review existing mechanisms of consumer input, thrust and output, and seek ways of improving these linkages via the 'consumer communication channel."

Doublespeak judges deemed this pristine bureaucratic language. It may have been written by a computer, though the Doublespeak Committee is careful not to make any such claim. Computers are not eligible for the annual award intended to memorialize examples in prose of superior obfuscation or double-dealing.

Moynihan almost edged out the State Department with his 1975 promise on "Face the Nation." Resigning as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, he said: "I would consider it dishonorable to leave this post and run for any office, and I hope it would be understood that if I do, the people, the voters to whom I would present myself in such circumstances, would consider me as having said in advance that I am a man of no personal honor to have done so."

President Ford's 1973 avowal that he had no intention of seeking office in 1976 was also nominated for this year's Doublespeak Award.

One of the foremost candidates was Ronald Reagan's wife, Nancy. Asked, on "60 Minutes," her view of capital punishment, she said, "I'm for it." Asked why, she replied, "Because it saves lives."

Daniel J. Dietrich of the University of Wisconsin, chairman of the Doublespeak Committee, said the only foreign contender was President Idi Amin of Uganda, singled out for calling his secret police "The State Research Unit."

Christian drive along Israeli border stops short

(c) New York Times

Kfar Kela, Lebanon — The drive by Lebanese right-wing Christian militiamen to stretch a military security zone the length of the Israeli border has stopped short of its apparent goal, leaving a gap along the frontier at least temporarily under the control of leftist Lebanese and Palestinian forces.

The leftist-Palestinian gap is only a few miles long, extending roughly from a zone three or four miles south of this border town, to the leftist stronghold of Bint Jbail. Christian officers in the area predicted three weeks ago that they were on the verge of capturing Bint Jbail, but did not.

Whether the Christian operation stalled because it was too weak to close the gap, or because the Christians are taking orders from Syria or Israel to keep southern Lebanon as calm as possible, is not clear. But, despite reports reaching Beirut of constant and fierce battles being fought in the border area, civilian Lebanese who live here as well as the leftist militiamen and Israeli soldiers across the border say that the area has been quiet for at least a week, with only occasional exchanges of sniper fire and shells.

Repair first, Exon tells NU

By Dick Holman
Star Staff Writer

Gov. J. James Exon has asked University of Nebraska top officials and the Board of Regents to reevaluate NU priorities of new construction versus building upkeep.

Exon said in a telegram he "will support as a top priority a reasonable amount of increased funds to accelerate repairs on existing buildings." He asked regents to consider that offer in their Saturday meeting.

"If federal public works monies are available, I believe they should be applied first to building repair and maintenance, our obvious top priority," Exon said.

The governor declared he "was distressed" by a report given the Legislature this week, indicating NU is $19 million behind in deferred maintenance on its major buildings.

"The report concluded that NU is too concerned with adding more and more new buildings to the detriment of adequate maintenance on existing structures," Exon wrote, saying he believes the conclusion is "correct."

Citing examples, Exon noted that in the 1977-78 budget request NU submitted, "you have placed building repairs and maintenance only as a fifth priority," seeking "a comparatively small $670,000. As a first priority you have asked for a new building (Health, Physical Education and Recreation) eventually to cost $7.4 million in construction alone, but have again failed to indicate yearly additional on-going costs for utilities, maintenance and staffing."

Exon said that regents will be asked to approve a program statement for a new $15 million cardiovascular facility, "even though I vetoed (and the Legislature sustained) the $25,000 intended for planning the building" in 1976.

Those funds are to come from a budget item which Exon said he understands "supposedly had been severely reduced" by a 1976 Unicameral budget amendment. Thus he said "it appears NU has at a minimum seriously violated legislative and executive intent."

A third example, Exon said, is the NU application for federal public works funds for two new buildings, "one of which — a Lincoln campus personnel building — is not on your budget priority list."

"When," Exon asked, "we expect NU to set priorities through deliberate and careful consideration, rather than precipitous changes in direction?" Another example is "the current proposal to spend $1.4 million for additions to the new plant science complex," Exon wrote. He questioned whether NU has considered "diverting these funds to repairs and maintenance on existing structures, even if legislative approval is necessary."

Declaring it's "time for a reevaluation of your priorities," Exon said, "New buildings not only take away from funds potentially applied to better building maintenance and operational program and salary enrichment, but they also incur costs in the (extended) operational budget."

Large budget increases required to operate and staff new buildings don't leave much for existing programs, Exon said. He labeled "excessive" the NU request for $52 million-plus in construction commitments through 1980.

"This year, NU has added 655 new positions to its budget. For next year, the request is for 498 additional positions." Questioning which are for new programs or new buildings, Exon said because Lincoln and Omaha campuses enrollments are down this year, "I do not believe it is wise to keep expanding the NU physical structure."

2 more teens are arraigned for robbery

Two more teenagers were arraigned in Lancaster County Court Friday for robbing the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education early Wednesday morning.

Michale Nix, 16, 1533 N. 25th St., and Nigel Davis, 16, 2301 W. St., were charged with one count of robbery and one count of using a firearm to commit a felony.

On Wednesday, Kevin Giner, also 16, was arraigned on similar charges.

The youths allegedly walked into the Nebraska Center, at 1600 No. 33rd, about 5 a.m. Wednesday and demanded that the clerk turn over money in the desk.

County Judge Jeffere Chevroux fixed bond for Nix and Davis at $10,000 each. A preliminary hearing date will be set Nov. 30.

Mrs. Blazek found guilty on two charges

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

Lancaster District Judge Dale Fahrbruch found Mary Blazek guilty Friday of conspiring to help convicted murderer Wesley Peery escape during his sentencing hearing last June.

Fahrbruch also found Mrs. Blazek guilty of lying to police officers a year ago during the course of their investigation into the murder of Marianne Mitzner.

Mrs. Blazek, Peery's woman friend with whom he had been living at the time of his arrest last year, pleaded no contest to both charges.

She changed her plea from innocent to no contest following bargaining plea negotiations with the county attorney's office.

Deputy County Atty. Bob Gibson said he agreed to drop a perjury charge, a felony offense, in exchange for her change of plea to a lesser offense of providing false information to a police officer.

If convicted of the perjury charge along with the conspiracy charge, Mrs. Blazek could have been sentenced to serve up to 14 years in prison. Now, she could be sentenced to serve up to two years in prison or fined up to $10,000 on the conspiracy charge and imprisoned up to six months in the county jail or fined $500 on the second charge.

Mrs. Blazek's attorney, Chief Deputy Public Defender Richard Goos, said she disagreed with many of Gibson's statements about the two charges. However, she believed she probably would be convicted with the evidence he had.

Specifically Gibson charged that on May 29 Mrs. Blazek received a hand-written note from Peery instructing her to hire five men to help him escape.

On June 26, 1975, Gibson said Mrs. Blazek lied to police about her whereabouts on the morning of Mrs. Mitzner's murder. She also allegedly lied about seeing an ammunition box confiscated by police at her apartment, Gibson said.

A need for understanding

For over 20 years, Kiwanis International has attempted to foster greater understanding between farmers and the consumers of farm products through the observance of "Farm-City Week," which is always held during the week which includes Thanksgiving Day.

FARM AND CITY

PARTNERS IN PROGRESS A DECLARATION OF INTERDEPENDENCE

This year, Farm-City Week is being observed Nov. 19-25 and the theme is "A Declaration of Interdependence" — the interdependence of the agricultural and consumer segments of the economy; the health of one depending on the health of the other. Locally, the five Lincoln-area Kiwanis clubs Tuesday are sponsoring their annual Farm-City Week breakfast.

Perhaps at no other time in recent years has a dialogue between farm and city and a mutual understanding of the problems and needs of each been more necessary. The Kiwanis Farm-City Week observance helps toward that end as do the farmer-merchant banquets sponsored annually by many communities across the nation and different farm-city exchange programs which also are being tried in many areas of the country.

We are in an era in which farmers and labor view one another with hostility, in which consumers feel they have an inalienable right to cheap food, housewives protest rising prices at the store and boycott farm products and farmers protest falling market prices and place their future in the optimism, or lack of it, of their bankers. Parts of the agricultural economy are near ruin.

All parties have some pretty crazy ideas about each other that would be dispelled if they took the time and effort to better understand one another and their interdependence. It is important that there be a broad understanding of food production if wise policy decisions are to be made at the national level and if Americans are to continue to receive the supply of good, reasonably-priced food they are used to.

Change in Spain

Although the more fanatical reformers might not think so, the government-sponsored program of bringing democracy to Spain is being accomplished with what really amounts to dazzling speed and — so far at least — with some degree of peace.

The dictator Francisco Franco has been dead hardly a year and Spaniards are now able to speak out against his movement and his memory if they so choose; they can espouse unpopular causes — or popular ones which did not meet with official approval in the old days. The winds of change are sweeping Spain.

This last week the parliament which used to rubber stamp the fascist Franco's programs approved a bill which will lead to its abolition. The Cortes will be dissolved and next year a popularly-elected representative parliament will take its place.

To many Franco-era dissidents, impatient and passionate, change comes too slowly.

But change in the context of Spain's past and the problems it faces in the future or could face in the absence of restraint is not at a snail's pace.

There are those alive who remember Spain before Franco. There are those who still honor his memory and stand behind his cause. Most Spaniards alive today were born under his dictatorial rule. It is little wonder that there is some timidity in pressing the democratic reforms.

The important thing for Spaniards is to accept the changing currents without letting them sweep too far the other way; from one form of tyranny to another, from a dictatorship of the right to a dictatorship of the left.

One-step-at-a-time reform, if the steps come fairly briskly, seems to be the proper remedy. Change coming in torrents could wreck rather than establish the desired new order.

The internal threats

Washington — One thing the press doesn't have to worry about is getting publicity for its own cause. Let there be a real or potential threat to our treasured First Amendment freedom — a gag rule in Nebraska or a congressional chase after Daniel Schorr — and full, well-headlined attention is paid. Even when one of its own dies, the press likes to provide a good send-off in the form of a glowing obituary.

Less interest is shown, however, in suggestions that some of journalism's problems are internal and that the press is not the perfect, totally dedicated institution it would like to seem. That is not headline news.

For that reason, if for no other, people in the news business and their customers who take the press seriously should read an article in the current Center Magazine, a publication of the Fund for the Republic's Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions.

The article, "The Media's Conflict of Interests," is by Donald McDonald, editor of the magazine. Its thesis is this: "Today, in some respects the most interesting and formidable threat to consistently responsible journalism comes not so much from the government as from the mass media themselves."

It is, you might say, a 15,000-word exploration of A. J. Liebling's immortal aphorism: "Freedom of the press belongs to the man who owns one," with a bow to his less well-known comment that the press "is the weak sly under the bed of democracy."

McDonald argues that two facts have a harmful influence on the quality of serious journalism today: the big-business nature of the media and the increasing concentration of media ownership in fewer hands.

Both of these conditions were not foreseen when the special protection for the press was written into the Bill of Rights, he says, and both jeopardize diversity of expression in the press. The result: "They make problematic the possibility of realistic and wise decision-making by the American people."

McDonald suggests four areas of reform: deconcentration of media ownership, encouragement of new media outlets, the opening up of existing media channels, and development of professional standards and rights for journalists.

In recommending the article, which is impossible to fairly summarize here, I am not endorsing all that McDonald has to say. I find it hard, for one thing, to reconcile his suggestions for government subsidies with his claim that he would keep the government out of news content except for enforcement of the Fairness Doctrine in broadcasting.

On the other hand, some of his proposals — the establishment of a print version of Public Broadcasting, for example — are interesting. So is his suggestion that journalists could use some protection from their employers, as well as the traditional protection against official threats to their freedom. "The working journalist has only as much freedom as his employer chooses to give him," he says. Yet "citizens must depend upon their journalists to provide the information they need to make self-government work . . ."

As for the economic concentration of today's press, McDonald presents some facts that should be better known: Ninety-six per cent of the daily newspaper cities in this country have only one publisher. In 1910, 100 million Americans were served by 2,400 newspapers; today, 220 million are served by 1,775.

These figures are made even more striking by the rise of the newspaper chains, further restricting press ownership, and by the widespread ownership of radio and television stations by newspapers in the same communities.

Aside from McDonald's own ideas, the article is a useful compendium of thought-provoking comments about the press that are not found in the usual tract on the glories of the First Amendment. Here are a few:

Walter Lippmann: "A free press exists only where newspaper readers have access to other newspapers which are competitors and rivals so that editorial comment and news reports can — regularly and promptly — be compared, verified, and validated. A press monopoly is incompatible with the free press."

The 1947 report of the Commission on Freedom of the Press: "Protection against government is now not enough to guarantee that a man who has something to say shall have a chance to say it. The ownership and managers of the press determine which persons, which facts, which versions of the facts and which ideas shall reach the public . . . The freedom of the press can remain a right of those who publish only if it incorporates into itself the right of the citizen and the public interest . . ."

A. J. Liebling: "What you have in a one-paper town is a privately owned public utility that is constitutionally exempt from public regulation . . . As to the freedom of the individual journalist in such a town, it corresponds exactly with what the publisher will allow him."

Eric Sevareid: "The bigger our information media, the less courage and freedom of expression they allow. Bigness means weakness."

Thomas I. Emerson, retired Yale law professor: "... Greater attention must be given to the right of the citizen to hear varying points of view and the right to have access to information upon which such points of view can be intelligently based."

As McDonald notes, governmental threats to freedom of the press require constant vigilance. But there are other threats too, internal threats, which are not publicized and therefore only dimly perceived by the public. They deserve more attention.

Mr. Ambassador Harriman, still serving

Marquis Childs

until after the election.

On his side, Brezhnev discussed frankly the hardliners in the comintern and their doubts about any relaxation of tensions with the United States. He said he had committed himself to the policy that had led to SALT I and, hopefully, would bring about SALT II.

Harriman was convinced that Brezhnev had put his position in as honest and straightforward a fashion as possible. He did not hesitate to remind the chairman of some of the embarrassments arising under the Helsinki agreement, with flagrant violations of freedom of exit and other stipulations.

After Moscow the Harrimans went to Yugoslavia where diplomatic bungling had produced a thicket of ill will.

This was compounded by Carter's own ill-advised comment on whether or not American troops should intervene if the independence of Yugoslavia were threatened upon the death of 84-year-old Marshal Tito. Harriman had extensive talks that helped to ease the situation.

To characterize Harriman as a hawk or a dove is nonsense and in particular because of one of the crucial steps in his career. Ambassador to Moscow in the closing years of World War II, he returned to Washington after the armistice to tell President Truman the full truth about Stalin's post-war plans.

The dictator had not the slightest intention of removing Russian troops from Eastern Europe and giving the satellites a chance for independence. This was his preserve and he intended to keep it with all the ruthlessness that had seen the extinction of millions of Soviet citizens.

I have a vivid memory of a session with Harriman held at that time with a dozen or so commentators in which he sought to give us the same facts. The pro-Soviet propaganda during the war had been very strong and some were reluctant to believe him. But every word he spoke was proved by later events.

With the enormous arsenal of nuclear weapons on each side of the divide, Harriman has come to believe there is no alternative but not, as he has put it, to peaceful co-existence but competitive co-existence; competitive in all fields of excellence.

I am sure his influence will be in opposition to ever larger military budgets and to the limited nuclear war that is part of the Schlesinger doctrine with active disciples prepared to push it. He wants nothing for himself except, as in Moscow, the role of good citizen.

Returning from Europe recently, I told him I had talked with many Europeans who took it for granted that Harriman would be the next secretary of state. He laughed. "Ten years ago I would have been interested," he said, "but not today."

As ambassador to London and to Moscow, as governor of New York with a half-dozen posts in the State Department, including an effort to end the Vietnam war long before the sorry collapse that brought such opprobrium on the United States, Carter should draw on this range of experience not merely in the interval of transition but once he is in the White House — and not occasionally, but on a week-to-week basis.

May I say for myself that I hope this wise man can be with us until 90 or, for that matter, 100. Born very rich, he might have been a polo player and playboy and one of those donors who save their conscience by tax-deductible gifts. He has instead been a foremost public citizen in a nation where that title is all too rare.

Are we all seeking a fifth cartridge?

Tom Wicker

New York — Owing mostly to the tidal wave of crime that has engulfed the nation in recent years, there's not much doubt that the American people are overwhelmingly in favor of the death penalty. It remains to be seen whether they really want executions.

Every poll shows the public approves of the death penalty levied for major crimes. When the California Supreme Court ruled in 1971 that capital punishment was impermissible under that state's constitution, Californians promptly voted in a referendum to reinstate it.

When the federal Supreme Court ruled in 1972 that the death penalty as then administered was unconstitutional, 35 states hurried to enact new death penalty laws they hoped would meet the court's test.

But neither in California nor in any other state has anyone been put to death under the new laws — some of which subsequently have been upheld by the Supreme Court. No legal execution has taken place in the United States since 1967; only a handful has been carried out since 1960; and the number has been falling steadily since 1935, when more than 500 people were legally executed in America.

Since 1972, at least 500 convicted persons have gone to Death Row, under sentence of execution; yet not one has actually been executed. Granted the legal confusion that has surrounded the subject during that period; there seems at least some cause to suspect that Americans favor the death penalty in the abstract but are not wildly anxious to watch some real person actually go to the electric chair or the gas chamber.

That impression, whatever its validity, can only be strengthened by the bizarre case of Gary Mark Gilmore, the confessed murderer who has asked the State of Utah to proceed forthwith to execute him according to the sentence he received in what he has conceded was a fair trial.

The Gilmore case would be remarkable if only for the fact that its principal has volunteered himself for summary execution, rather than fighting for life through all the numerous legal maneuvers open to him. It is made grotesque by the fact that under Utah law the execution would be carried out by firing squad. And the essentially repugnant and inhumane aspects of any execution are dramatized by the fact that the rifle of one of the five persons in the firing squad will be loaded with a blank cartridge.

That is so that no one of the five can be sure that he or she fired a lethal shot, and any one of the five can tell himself or herself that perhaps he or she did not really help to kill Gary Mark Gilmore. Could there be more graphic evidence that no one really wishes to be an executioner? Or that in the final analysis, what we may want "society" or "the law" to do, or what we may think proper in the abstract, most of us would not wish to do directly and immediately by our own hands to another human being?

Gilmore's crimes are not in dispute; they were heinous; the death penalty for him is legally valid. Yet, various legal efforts by the state and by private parties are being made to stop the execution he has demanded be carried out. Utah's governor, proclaiming the death penalty a proper form of punishment, nevertheless took legal steps to have Gilmore's sentence reviewed despite Gilmore's admissions of guilt. And when Gilmore made an apparent suicide attempt, he was rushed off to hospital, revived, and given the necessary treatment to keep him alive — presumably so that the firing squad may yet do the job Gilmore has prevented from doing for himself.

What kind of nightmare logic is at work here? If Gary deserves death for his deeds, by what rationale is his suicide to be prevented by the very society that demands his death? Should the State of Utah or any other be less willing to participate or acquiesce in a suicide than to precipitate the actual taking of the life of some unwilling person? Is there a special added public satisfaction to be gained not just from the cessation of an offender's life, but from the spectacle of society and the law actually blotting out that life by gunfire or electric charge?

Or could it conceivably be that in keeping with the public record of the disappearance of executions in America over the past four decades, we do not really want to kill people, or even let them obliterate themselves, so much as we wish to proclaim them officially unfit to live?

If so, the death penalty in America may finally provide us with a permanent Death Row, populated by the living dead, and a kind of universal fifth cartridge to which we can all lay claim.

This Quixote builds instead

Bellwood (AP) — Franklin Bock, a modern-day resident of Bellwood, provides a sharp contrast with Don Quixote of old.

Quixote was a mythical character who got his kicks by attempting to destroy windmills.

Bock, on the other hand, builds windmills. He has completed more than 50 of them since he retired from farming several years ago.

A Bock windmill isn't like most of the ornamental windmills to be seen in Nebraska, because he builds them from pieces of pipe, old bicycle wheels and disks from retired cream separators.

These things are bolted and welded together into rather unusual looking windmills.

Most of the mills Bock has made were built to spin horizontally instead of vertically the way conventional varieties do.

The advantage of a horizontal windmill is that it will spin no matter which way the wind blows, he explained.

Bock has given away many of the mills to friends and relatives in the Midwest. There are more than half a dozen in Bellwood alone.

Parts for the windmills are getting harder to find, especially separator disks, according to Bock. And the cost of parts has gone up considerably during the five years since he made his first attempt at building one.

"Stove bolts used to cost three-fourths of a cent each. Now they cost three and a half cents," he said.

Disks are bolted to a bicycle wheel and the wheel is mounted on a section of pipe which is buried in the ground. Most of Bock's windmills have three wheels and a minimum of 30 disks, although some have as many as five wheels.

Bock's garage workshop contains a variety of wheels, disks and other parts necessary for construction.

During the bicentennial year, many persons have requested that the mills be painted in red, white and blue, Bock said.

A friend who lives near U.S. 81 has sold a number of the mills to passing motorists. Eight of them were sold to persons with California license plates, Bock said.

But in Bellwood, Bock is possibly better-known for his expertise in bicycle repair than in windmill construction, at least to the younger members of the community.

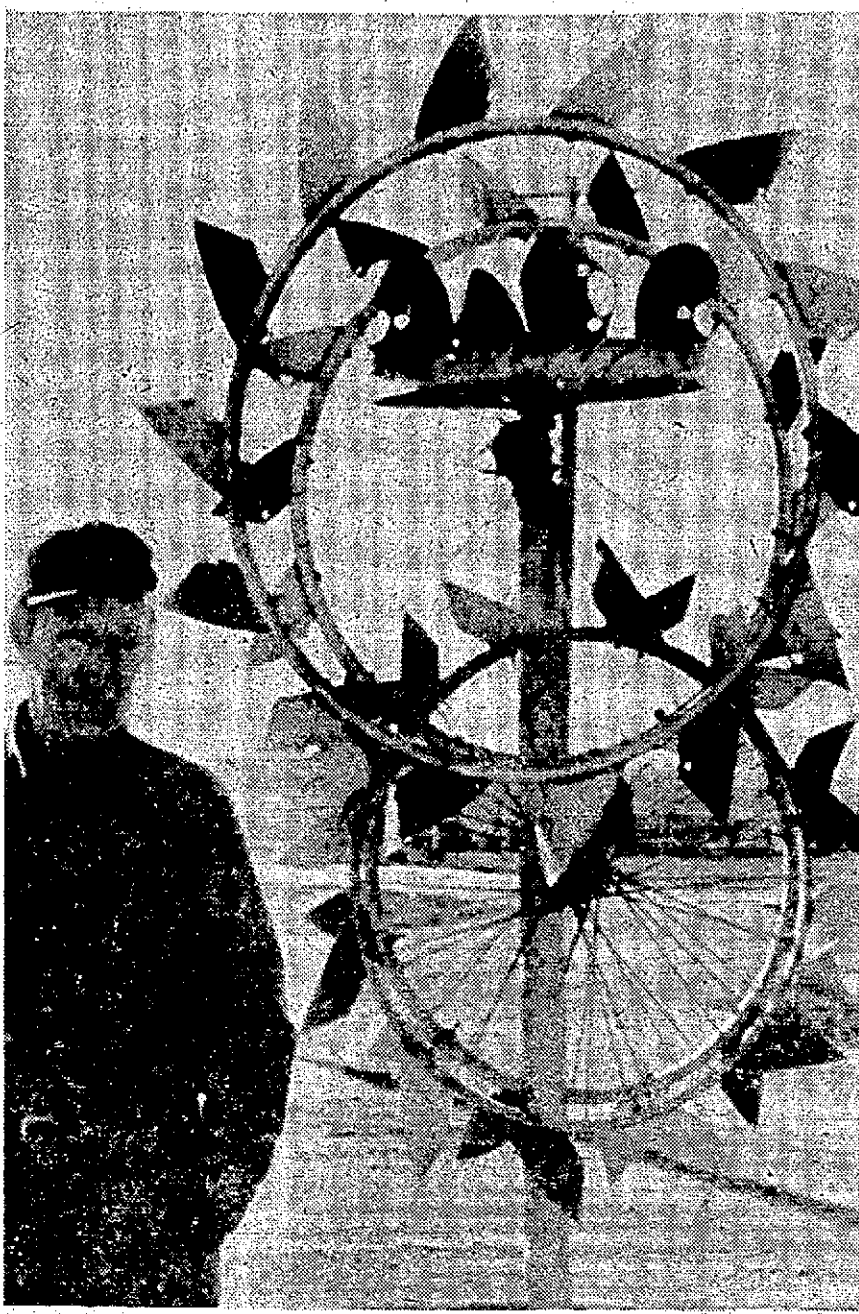

He keeps a supply of patched bicycle innertubes on hand in his garage. Youngsters bring their flats in and ride away on a repaired tire, free of charge.

"That's why they come looking here. They like the prices," Bock said.

In addition, Bock replaces spokes and occasionally a bent frame.

He even gave one youngster an old, but serviceable, bicycle, free.

"A few days later he came back and wanted to trade me for a better one," Bock said. He traded.

Bellwood farmer Bock turns scraps into lawn ornaments.

Judge nixes damage suit in marijuana case

Omaha (UPI) — Senior U.S. District Judge Richard Robinson Friday dismissed a $200,000 damage suit filed against Police Chief Richard Andersen, two police officers and a deputy Douglas County attorney.

Robinson ruled against James P. Cleary, who alleged the defendants acted in "bad faith" and conspired to deprive him of his constitutional rights by their actions during a 1974 marijuana case which involved the disappearance of evidence.

In addition to Andersen, the defendants named were police officers Roy J. Wilson and Timothy G. Mead and Deputy County Atty. Jerome Merwald.

Cleary was arrested by Sacramento, Calif., police on Nov. 3, 1974, for a traffic violation. Upon a routine check with the National Crime Information Center, the officers discovered Cleary was the subject of an outstanding warrant for his arrest in Omaha on a charge of unlawful delivery of a controlled substance.

Court records showed Cleary waived extradition to Nebraska apparently because he was unable to post the required $25,000 bond and did not wish to spend the extended period in the Sacramento jail which the formal procedure would have required.

Omaha police arrived in Sacramento on Nov. 11 and returned Cleary to Omaha where he was released on a $2,000 bond.

During a preliminary hearing on Dec.

6, 1974, Merwald moved to dismiss the charge because the physical evidence — marijuana which Cleary allegedly sold to an undercover officer — could not be found.

Cleary then sued, contending the defendants, specifically Merwald, "willfully and maliciously" sought Cleary's extradition knowing the criminal case against Cleary "would not be prosecuted, or that any such prosecution was doomed to failure."

School boards group selects new officers

Delegates to the annual Nebraska State School Boards Association convention in Lincoln elected Dallas Darland of North Platte second vice president Friday.

Darland, a former North Platte school board member and a district director for the NSSBA, succeeds Dr. Stanley Jensen of York, who became first vice president replacing J. Paul McIntosh of Norfolk. McIntosh succeeds Irv Schwartz of Hildreth as president of the group.

Nebraska Education Commissioner Dr. Anne Campbell and Jerry Schreiner, executive director of United School Administrators, from Kansas City, were featured speakers during Friday's closing day sessions.

Californian seeks part of $2 million Theisen estate

Omaha (AP) — A California man has filed a suit in U.S. District Court in Omaha challenging Nebraska's inheritance laws.

The suit was filed by Thomas L. Theisen of Los Angeles against the estate of Joseph C. Theisen of Bassett and a son, Peter, of Bassett, administrator of his father's estate valued at more than $2 million.

Thomas Theisen claims that certain parts of the Nebraska statutes regarding inheritance are unconstitutional because they denied him equal protection of the law.

The plaintiff contends he is required to prove he is an heir of the father. At the same time, Theisen said it is presumed that he is an heir of the mother and thus the law discriminates against the deceased father on the basis of sex.

Thus, Theisen contends, Nebraska statutes violate the equal protection clauses in the U.S. and Nebraska Constitutions by presuming that the child shall inherit from the mother while denying such a presumption as to the father.

Theisen also asked for a temporary restraining order enjoining his brother and other from proceeding with the final hearing to settle the estate, scheduled for Nov. 29 in Rock County Court at Bassett, or for a preliminary injunction prohibiting the hearing until the dispute over his alleged share of the estate is resolved.

Radioactive fallout in state dependent on wind, rain

Weather conditions will play the major role in whether Nebraska receives any above-normal radioactive fallout next week from China's recent nuclear blast, a state environmental official said Friday.

H. Ellis Simmons, the State Environmental Control Department's radiology division director, said the latest data from the U.S. Environmental Pollution Agency indicate the radioactive plume, or cloud, will reach the West Coast Saturday night and move north.

However, Simmons said wind conditions could change the plume's movement across the United States and precipitation might cause radioactive debris to reach the ground.

Simmons declined to predict the chances of above-normal radioactive fallout in Nebraska.

Famous Scalp Specialist Tells Truth About Saving Falling Hair

These private individual consultations will be held at the Steeply Hollow, 4848 "O" Street, on Sunday, November 21, and Monday, November 22, from 1:00 P.M. to 3:00 P.M. Ask hotel clerk for Mr. R.L. Antone. He will do the rest. Phone 464-3166.

To provide the opportunity of having normal, healthy hair to the thousands who are desperately looking for help, the firm is sending specialists to various cities throughout the United States to conduct consultation and start home treatment.

Hopeless Cases Refused

No Cure All... We have no cure-all for sick, shiny baldness. International consultants will accept only clients whose hair we feel sure will respond to treatment. They cannot help individuals who are sick bald, or the majority of cases of baldness and excessive hair loss, called male pattern baldness, where no treatment, including the international treatment, is of any value. Therefore, international policy will continue their policy of refusing all hopeless cases.

There is one thing Antone wants to be certain every man and woman knows. If the temples or a spot begins to show upon the crown of the head, there is something wrong and it should be given immediate attention.

For Lifetime

"If clients follow our directions during treatment, and after they finish the course, there is no reason why they will not have hair all the rest of their lives," Antone said. "Our firm is definitely behind this treatment; it all depends on the individual client's faithful observation of a few simple rules."

How's Your Hair?

If it worries you, just go to the Steeply Hollow, 4848 "O" Street, on Sunday, November 21, or Monday, November 22, from 1:00 P.M. to 3:00 P.M. Ask Mr. R.L. Antone. Or phone 464-3166. No appointment necessary. Interviews are given in private with no possible embarrassment.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?"

Psalms 2 and Acts 4:25

In the second Psalm God asks this question, and then answers it. He tells who the heathen are, why they rage, and the consequences. Webster says "a heathen is one who does not believe in the God of the Bible." This definition fits in with what God says in this Psalm. The consequences are that God laughs at man's rebellion, speaks in His wrath, holds them in derision and vexes in His sore displeasure — is not nearly the whole earth and the inhabitants in a state of vexation and fear? "Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron. Thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel!" Think of the broken pieces of the Jewish people scattered about over the face of the earth, the nation to whom this message first came! About six million of them have been broken and perished within recent years. Instead of raging and railing at poor old Hitler it might be wise for us all to consider how much our rage against God's Laws may have been a cause, remembering what Christ said to Pilate: "Thou couldst have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above." "Not one sparrow falls to the ground without your Heavenly Father." "The curse causeless shall not come!"

It is the devil in men that cause them to rage against God's Moral Law His Ten Commandments. The devil, God and man's enemy, Christians are not immune from the devil entering into them. This statement is based on the experience of The Apostle Peter whom Christ declared "Blessed" because God had given a revelation as to whom Christ was, but then in the context of the same passage Jesus said to Peter: "Get thee behind me Satan: thou art an offense unto me: for thou savorest not of the things that be of God, but those that be of men." Mat. 16:13-23. Peter was saved through the intercession of Christ who after telling him of Satan's desire to possess him said: "I have prayed for thee..." The devil gained entrance into Peter because of his ignorance and unbelief of God's judgment that was to come upon Christ for the sins of mankind, their substitute. Peter was not seeking his own selfish ends when he left all to follow Christ. He had gotten a vision of himself and had said to Him: "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord! He was seeking salvation, but even then he was in great danger when the devil got in him.

(Today the church is lousy with those "who savor not of the things of God, but those that be of men," rejecting the plain teaching and truth of The Bible that God's wrath tell on Christ to atone for the sins of all mankind, provided they so accept Him, and it is to be feared that they have no spiritual kinship at all with Peter. "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses; of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy of, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing, and hath done despite to the Spirit of grace? For we know Him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith The Lord. And again, The Lord shall judge His people. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the Living God — For our God is a consuming fire." Here is a suggestion to those whose eyes are open and are horrified at the awful apostasy in high church circles: if you are not in a position to make an "overture" somewhere or other, then hasten and make a "detour" to your prayer closet, shut the door, and in secret lay the matter before your Father which sees in secret, and wait on The Lord patiently. He is more concerned than we are, and He has made oath "That the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of God as the waters cover the sea."

The devil also entered into another of Christ's disciples, held his ground, and finally carried him off to perdition a traitor and suicide! He got into Judas because he was self-seeking, covetous, a hog, a thief stealing from the meager means of the little "splinter band" of Christ and His disciples. (Have you stolen something, without repenting and making restitution to the uttermost of your ability, and yet passing yourself off as a Christian?) The devil knows he has a buddy, a friend and partner in a covetous, hogish thief. That may account for the fact that the legion of devils about to be cast out of one poor man prayed Christ to let them go into the herd of hogs. Beware of coveting that which is another's, for Christ gave the devils permission to enter the hog! However, the devils may have been disappointed in those four-legged hogs when they ran wild and drowned in the sea, and seemed to say by their action "we had rather be dead than devils!"

BLESSED IS THE MAN — (WHOSE) DELIGHT IS IN THE LAW OF THE LORD; AND IN HIS LAW DOETH HE MEDITATE DAY AND NIGHT." PSALM 1:1 and 2.

Nebraskan pleads innocent to $1.5 million stock fraud

By Gerry Switzer
Star Staff Writer

Dean H. Ubben of Lincoln and Beatrice has pleaded innocent to 17 counts of fraud and conspiracy in connection with an alleged $1.5 million nationwide stock fraud.

Ubben, who operates Dean Ubben & Associates in Beatrice, was one of 10 defendants who entered innocent pleas in connection with the fraudulent 1973 common stock offering by Industries International Inc. of Denver.

The arraignment in U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York followed a federal grand jury indictment of the 10 handed down last week, according to Jed Rakoff, U.S. assistant attorney in charge of the case.

He said the case had been under investigation by his office for about a year, but the Securities and Exchange Commission had been investigating the fraud for about two years.

Eight other individuals have entered guilty pleas in the case which involves individuals from the New York area, far West, and five from the Iowa-Nebraska area. But Ubben is the only Nebraskan, Rakoff said. Ubben, who was released on $10,000 bond, appeared in court with his New York attorney, Edward S. Panzer.

The alleged fraud began in 1971 and continued to the present, Rakoff said, with substantial profits being realized between Feb. 28, 1973 and March 27, 1973.

The "conspirators artificially inflated prices of stock from 50¢ to more than $6.50 per share during that one-month period," Rakoff said.

The defendants "dumped" their own shares on the market and took the profits, according to Rakoff.

Among other things, the defendants are charged with falsely representing that the company had great capacity to manufacture a new pneumatic industrial pump when in fact the firm was a small machine job shop, he said.

Most of the inflated securities were sold in the Des Moines area, with those indicted reaping a total "windfall profit," of $1.5 million, Rakoff reported.

Rakoff said a trial date has not been set for Ubben or the other nine defendants entering innocent pleas but most cases are disposed of in that court within six months.

Each of the counts carries a maximum penalty of five years' imprisonment and/or fines ranging from $1,000 to $10,000, Rakoff said.

Ubben, who is known as a promoter and developer in Beatrice, has been manager of the largest shopping center in Beatrice since it opened in 1968, and is president of Great Western Real Estate and Com-Power Inc., both of Beatrice.

Rakoff's records list Ubben's home address as 4624 Grassridge Rd. in Lincoln, but the federal assistant attorney said his only contact with Ubben prior to arraignment had been through Ubben's legal counsel.

Hospital group approves changes in rate review

By Gracia McAndrew
Star Staff Writer

Approval of adjustments to the Nebraska Hospital Association's hospital rate review process were announced Friday at the meeting of the NHA rate review committee.

Norman Clemm of the NHA staff said the changes, designed to encourage greater rate review participation by Nebraska hospitals, are effective immediately. The NHA staff is sending out letters of intent to Nebraska hospitals, he said, explaining the changes and asking facilities to indicate whether or not they will be participating in rate review.

Because of the changes, Clemm said, hospitals can use some of their own internal record reports when submitting information to the committee, as long as all of the necessary data are included. Prior to the changes, hospitals participating in the process were required to complete and submit specific rate review budgetary forms.

When determining certification on new hospital rates, the adjustments will provide hospitals greater flexibility, since such long-range plans as active enlistment of additional physicians in a community will be considered.

Previously, the formula for determining new rates "would force the hospital to charge high rates in the current year and possibly lower rates the following year if new physicians located in the community and the patient census improved," Clemm said.

Now, hospitals can justify their requests for rate changes not only by complying with full financial requirements, but also by informing the committee of their long-range plans.

At the NHA annual meeting in October, association members voted to phase out, with in six months, the rate review program unless more hospitals — representing 75% of Nebraska's hospital budget dollars — participated in the process.

"We haven't got a 75% commitment yet, but we haven't heard from all of the hospitals yet," he said, adding that many hospitals indicated a "positive" attitude toward the changes.

Also at the meeting, the committee approved new rates for the Mary Lanning Memorial Hospital in Hastings.

Among the new rates, constituting a 6% overall increase, are: private rooms from $79-$88 per diem to $83-$92; semiprivate rooms from $68 to $72; intensive care from $44 per diem or $6 per hour to $156 or $6.50 per hour; delivery room from $55 to $70; and emergency service from $13-$18 to $14-$19.

This is the third year the hospital has participated in the rate review program. The new rates are effective Dec. 31.

NU med school given four-year accreditation

Oriaha (AP) — A national agency has found the University of Nebraska College of Medicine "greatly strengthened" and granted a four-year accreditation, Dean Perry Rigby said Thursday.

After a 1973 review, the college was given only a two-year accreditation by the committee representing the American Medical Association and the Association of American Medical Colleges.

The 1973 team found a number of problems, including the way the college was governed, faculty morale, financial support and the need for more outpatient treatment space.

Dr. Rigby said this year the committee concluded the college had solved many of its problems. The report will be presented to the Board of Regents Saturday.

Shooting accident kills youth

Pius X drive at 75% of goal

The Pius X High School building development program has reached 75% of its $750,000 goal, according to general chairman Sam J. Marchese.

As of Friday, the campaign had raised $562,265, Marchese said. That amount was bolstered by $54,000 from volunteers at Sacred Heart Parish, the first to complete their drive. That amount is 35% of their $40,000 goal, Marchese added. Father Frank Machovec and Fred Kelly were campaign chairman of that parish.

"We are urging every campaign worker to complete their calls this week," Marchese said. "With several cards outstanding we are confident we can reach the goal, but it will take a real effort during the next days."

Marchese also announced the two-month campaign will conclude Nov. 29.

Dead woman's brother loses $750,000 lawsuit

United Press International

A South Dakota man, sued for $750,000 by the brother of an Almsworth woman who was killed in a traffic accident, has been exonerated by a U.S. district court jury in Lincoln.

Marvin Leroy Reagle was named defendant in a suit filed by John K. Jeffres, administrator of the estate of his sister, Mary, Ann. Miss Jeffres was a passenger in Reagle's pickup truck on Feb. 18, 1974, when she was killed in a traffic accident near Kilgore.

The suit alleged Reagle was operating the truck in a negligent and reckless manner and was under the influence of intoxicants.

Deprogrammed EX-MOONIE to speak in Lincoln. Former member Dennis Coper of the Church of the Unification founded by the Reverend Sun Myung Moon, will speak on the topic:

GOP to assess election faults

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer
 You might call it group therapy. Stunned by their most disappointing election reversals in a dozen years, Nebraska Republicans will gather in Lincoln Saturday to survey the wreckage.

The 102-member state central committee has scheduled an open discussion to dissect the election at its 1:15 p.m. meeting at the Radisson-Cornhusker Hotel.

Before that, the 31-member state executive committee will gather for a breakfast meeting and the GOP will conduct a 10 a.m. seminar featuring spokesmen for this month's two Republican congressional winners.

The GOP House candidate who lost, Lee Terry of Omaha, will be in Lincoln for the meetings and hopes to find a party determined to "strengthen itself" rather than one content to accept "a bunch of excuses" for what happened three weeks ago.

The party's other losing candidate, Congressman John McCollister of Omaha, who fell in the Senate race to Edward Zorinsky, will not be on hand. "John Y. thought his presence might inhibit the discussion," his chief aide, Chuck Hagel, explained by telephone from Washington. But McCollister has privately discussed the election results and the state of his party with a number of officials, including State Chairman Anne Batchelder and National Committeeman William Morrow, both of Omaha.

McCollister has also visited about those subjects with Sen. Roman Hruska, Congressman Charles Thone of Lincoln and Congresswoman Virginia Smith of Chappell, Hagel said.

Terry said he is going to Lincoln chiefly as an observer, although he is "putting together a paper on this" for later consideration.

His written proposals will deal largely with "the obligation of the party to its nominees after the primary election," he said.

"I will offer some suggestions as we go along," he noted.

"I think the party recognizes that it needs some strengthening. I know there were lots of areas I was not fully satisfied with, but I'm not sure criticism is the right approach. "It's largely an image problem. We are a real minority party," he said.

"I am hoping that out of this meeting we can at least see a great will to make the difference. That's what I'm looking for."

"If I see everybody seems to be satisfied that there is no need for change, satisfied with just a bunch of excuses, then I'll have to look and see if I want to stay with it."

"I want to help the Republican Party, and I'm hoping for the best Saturday."

Terry was defeated by Democrat John Cavanaugh in the Second District.

GOP State Executive Director Lloyd Herbener of Lincoln said he will have suggestions for "a specific program of action" during the central committee conclave. But he declined to discuss specifics prior to the meeting.

Saturday's catharsis begins with the 8:30 a.m. breakfast of the executive committee.

Republicans will caucus in congressional district meetings to assess election results after the 10 a.m. seminar so they will be ready for the afternoon discussion with the full central committee.

Democrat victory opens up jobs

Omaha (AP) — A handful of federal jobs paying as much as $39,600 will be up for grabs in Nebraska after Democrats Jimmy Carter and Edward Zorinsky replace their Republican predecessors next year.

Sen.-elect Zorinsky and three other top Democratic office holders were together in Omaha Friday and informally discussed how job applications will be handled.

Gov. J. James Exon said the applications should be sent to state Democratic chairman Dick White in Lincoln.

With Exon and Zorinsky, were Rep.-elect John Cavanaugh and Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan.

Exon said the party headquarters at 2635 O St. in Lincoln has adequate staff to process applications for various jobs that generally go to the party in power in the White House.

White, contacted by telephone in Denver where he was vacationing, said he already has handled numerous inquiries about possible job openings in Nebraska.

He said no one knows exactly how many jobs may be involved at the state level.

The top federal job in the state expected to go to a Democrat is U.S. attorney for Nebraska.

U.S. Atty. Daniel Wherry said he plans to resign Jan. 20 subject to the appointment and confirmation of his successor.

Wherry, 33, whose salary is $39,600 a year, said he plans to remain in Omaha or Lincoln, probably in private practice.

He said he has no idea who his successor will be and that Zorinsky probably will be able to nominate the new U.S. attorney just as retiring Republican Sen. Roman Hruska nominated Wherry.

The posts of U.S. attorney, federal marshal and chairman of the Missouri River Basin Commission are Nebraska jobs subject to presidential appointment.

Exon continues Guard probe

United Press International
 Gov. J. James Exon's legal counsel says the governor hopes to complete next week his investigation of the mock hanging incident involving Nebraska Army National Guardsman Dan Briscoe of Lincoln.

Attorney Bill Hoppner said Thursday much of the testimony so far does not agree with that of Jim Sanford, an Omaha guardsman, who said Nebraska and Mississippi National Guardsmen planned to lynch Briscoe last Memorial Day at Fort Gordon, Ga.

Sanford claimed the guardsmen put a noose on Briscoe because he is black, had bummed money and cigarettes from them and because they disliked him. Sanford also said the hanging incident occurred while some guardsmen were drunk and smoking marijuana and while their officers were not around.

Hoppner said the governor had received a copy of the report of Mississippi's investigation of the incident, but its contents would not be released until Exon announces his findings.

Sanford said he did not see the mock hanging, but he said Briscoe told him he got his hands inside the noose before it tightened.

Sanford said a guardsman had warned him not to speak out on the incident, but he was relating what he saw and heard because he is convinced Guard officials are not interested in punishing the guilty persons and, instead, will continue a "cover-up."

Hoppner said Exon intends next week to release his report, including its findings and recommendations, and information about "whatever action he deems necessary to take."

In his private investigation, Exon has been interviewing Nebraska Guardsmen about the hanging incident.

Meanwhile in Washington, Maj. Erik Opsahl of the National Guard Bureau said his superior officers have received a copy of the Mississippi report. Exon had requested the Mississippi governor to conduct an investigation.

That report "will be studied in light of the information contained in the Nebraska report," which Opsahl said his bureau hasn't yet received. "Until then" and until it's reviewed, "it would be inappropriate for us to discuss the contents of the (Mississippi) report."

In Lincoln, Guard information officer Capt. Leonard Krenk said, "Our report has been compiled here at our level. Gen. (Francis) Winner has finished the report from the standpoint of the (Nebraska) Military Department" and it's "now at Gov. Exon's office."

Krenk said the adjutant general's report "will not go forward" to Washington "until the governor completes his." At Exon's direction, Winner conducted a departmental investigation.

Ed board to discuss construction

A review of preliminary building plans for an addition at West Lincoln School is on tap for Tuesday night's meeting of the Board of Education at Goodrich Junior High, 4600 Lewis Ave.

The board will review updated architects plans as the first step in what may lead to a spring building project at the crowded elementary school. Original plans for the addition have yellowed with age during the years the board has tabled action because of fund shortage.

Also on the agenda are two projects involving Lincoln High School. One is the report of the city planning commission's approval of closing J Street in front of the school in favor of a mall-park complex. The other is an application for federal monies to finance the construction of the "oval," a track and field addition on school-owned land.

The federal money is granted to areas of high unemployment as an economic boost. The school currently rents houses on the site and plans include razing those structures for the project. Lincoln would be one of about eight cities seeking the money.

Following the business meeting the board will meet with parent groups from 12 Lincoln schools, the third in a series of such meetings this year.

Thieves used mistletoe ruse

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — Centuries ago, standing under a mistletoe branch was used by thieves to avoid arrest. Such legal sanctuary was abolished by Queen Elizabeth I, says Sally Hopkins, research historian for Hallmark, a greeting card publisher. She said mistletoe was considered a sacred plant by Druid Priests in England, and anyone standing beneath it was given divine protection.

National Guard ponders closing some of units

Norfolk (AP) — The Nebraska National Guard may reduce some units and close others because of low enrollments, according to Maj. William Whitney, recruiting and retention manager.

Whitney told Norfolk Chamber of Commerce members Thursday that the guard enrolment of 4,500 members is 17% below its authorized strength.

The units should be at 80% of their authorized strength in order to have an active organization, he said.

"It's a good way to earn money and prepare for the future," says Jeffrey Bracken of his paper route.

His business venture has also enabled him to earn enough money for necessities and extras and helped him to become better acquainted in his community.

A carrier salesman for The Lincoln Star for three years, Jeff is known as a young man "who takes pride in keeping his customers happy by getting his papers out efficiently and early."

Jeff attends Elmwood Junior High School and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He is active in the Boy Scout program and the winner of the Duty to God Award.

He is using some of his route profits to pay off his motorcycle

Jeff's hobbies include fishing, hunting and working with gas-powered planes and cars.

Pleased with their son's business venture, Jeff's parents say that the route has taught him responsibility and money management. They also feel that other young people would profit from this type of work experience.

Jeff is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Bracken.

Sunday Philippians 1:1-11

Tuesday II Peter 3:9-18

Wednesday John 8:31-36

Thursday Romans 6:15-23

Friday I Corinthians 9:1-18

Saturday I Corinthians 9:19-27

The Pilgrims came to America for more than land. They risked their lives and possessions to gain the right to worship freely and to live democratically. On these basic principles—liberty and equality—America was founded.

The Pilgrims left us another heritage—thanksgiving. Newly arrived in this alien land, they gave thanks to the benevolent God who guided them across the sea and who would sustain them through their first harrowing years in America.

The meaning of those early days is sometimes lost to us today in affluent America. We may forget that this prosperity is not entirely the product of our own labors, but is also the result of the beneficence of God.

Let us then celebrate our good fortune—in church and at home. Let us give thanks!

Among clouds, dentist flies in grand style

Chuck Carothers is an unusual man who mixes dentistry, stunt flying and transcendental meditation.

On weekdays, starting at 7 a.m., Carothers is in his south Lincoln dental office. When the office closes at 4 p.m. and the weather is good, he hops in his car, heads for the airport and climbs into the clouds.

How does a dentist get into stunt flying? "I did a loop and I liked it," he said.

Carothers, who has been flying longer than he's been filling teeth, learned to fly when he was a college freshman. Two military pilots took him up in an army trainer and taught him aerobatics.

"All I had to do was furnish the gas," he said.

Indirectly, flying led him to his other avocation, transcendental meditation (TM).

During an airshow, he noticed that a friend who was in stiff competition was relatively unaffected by the pressures of the meet.

"Most of the pilots looked haggard after a while," Carothers said, because the competition lasts several days and aerobatics take extreme concentration.

"You could tell by the guy's eyes he had a super power or something," he said.

Carothers said he later found out his friend was meditating sometimes between tournament flights when the pressure was building up. His friend did well in the air show because he was able to avoid the little mistakes that pressure could have caused.

A little while later, Carothers bought a book on transcendental meditation. The book had pictures and some of the basic philosophy behind meditation, but did not explain fully how to meditate. It also had a list of phone numbers across the country to call for instruction, but Lincoln wasn't among them.

"I called all over trying to find someone (who taught TM)," he said. After trying the university, an Omaha number and a Denver number, he got a tip from Cincinnati: Try the white pages of the phone book. It worked.

Carothers has been meditating since July and has recruited his wife and daughter, plus his dental assistants.

He said TM helps him both as a dentist and as a pilot.

"It helps in the office in a lot of stress situations," he explained. After particularly hard dental problems, such as a tooth that takes a long time to fill, Carothers said, he may meditate before seeing the next patient if he has time.

After work, he meditates before going flying. Aerobatics is a demanding sport that takes constant practice, he explained. Formerly, he would have to take a nap after work, then drag out to the airport and putter around his plane before getting airborne.

Now he comes home, changes, meditates for 20 minutes, rushes to the airport and takes off. He says TM makes him feel as if he just awakened in the morning.

TM also has given Carothers increased stamina. Flying upside down, in inverted spins or loops is physically taxing. Before he could only practice for about 20 minutes; now he can last almost an hour.

But he still gets his flying done faster than before and gets home for supper sooner.

"My wife likes that," he said.

Carothers has won top honors in three flying tournaments this year. Two before starting TM, one after.

"When you go to a contest, you've got to be a good pilot," Carothers said. "TM isn't going to pull you through it."

His meditating, he said, has made his life more productive.

"It just all fits together."

And Chuck Carothers fits a lot into his life.

Meditating helps Carothers keep calm.

Dear Abby

By Abigail

DEAR READERS: There are thousands of people in this country who are lingering as invalids in hospitals, institutions and homes because the transplant organs they need are not available. These include kidneys, corneas, hearts, pituitary glands and other organs and tissues that must be removed from accident victims quickly before oxygen starvation renders them useless.

What most people do not know is that 35 of the 50 states now use the driver's license to identify organ donors. Under the Anatomical Gift Act, which provides the legal support for the driver's license designation, people who are killed in traffic accidents may avoid dying in vain.

The organ donor sticker form (or decal) in 35 states authorizes doctors to remove needed organs after the victim's death and to use those organs in transplant operations.

Readers may learn the details of organ donation laws by writing the Motor Vehicle Departments of their own states. They may write also to the National Kidney Foundation, 116 East 27th Street, New York, N.Y. 10016.

"Gift of Life" laws are relatively new. Their application through the driver's license is increasing among all states. The universal adoption of the Anatomical Gift Act (with its strict safeguards verifying that the donor is in fact dead before organs may be removed) would offer new hope to the country's afflicted.

I have personally "willed" my usable organs, and feel that nothing I could leave after my death will be of greater value.

Buddies band finds music sounds great

By Joanne Farris

DEAR JOANNE FARRIS: My old-timers band buddies elected me to write to you about our interesting pastime. We play at every home football game of our college. Our music is good, we get in free, and we have a ball. The kids in the regular band gather round to watch and listen to us "wind up" after each game. Music enriches our lives, and we're not lonely.

COMMENT: More power to you. Bands and orchestras are wonderful musical outlets for talented persons of all ages. Like the choirs, glee clubs, barbershop quartets, and the Sweet Adelines that I wrote about this summer, they are inter-generational, too. I have a friend who is in her late 70s. She plays the harp in the symphony and opera orchestras and gives piano and harp lessons to boot.

Is there some special characteristic musicians have or acquire through music which helps them age well? I think of Vladimir Horowitz, the pianist, who at 72, began teaching this fall for the first time at the Mannes College of Music in New York. Aaron Copland, 76, was awarded an honorary doctorate of music at Leeds University (Great Britain) on Oct. 18 and conducted the British Broadcasting Company Symphony Orchestra in a Bicentennial concert as a part of the Leeds Music Festival.

Arthur Rubenstein, who has been performing on the piano for 70 years has played what is probably his last concert, due to failing eyesight. At 89, he is too busy to retire, though.

Life Begins At Forty

Maestro Leopold Stokowski made his first recordings with the Philadelphia Orchestra in 1917. Last month, at 94, he conducted for a recording session in England. "I spend my days studying the scores of the great masters," he says. "Except when I am sleeping, I am thinking of the next time I must conduct great music." In June he signed a recording contract that obligates him to make four records a year until 1982, when he will be 100!

Music is a life-force for these artists. They love what they do. Think of the millions of music lovers of all ages who flock to the concert halls, opera houses, jazz festivals, coffee shops, and so forth, to listen to all forms of musical entertainment.

Who can count the number of musical records and tapes in constant use? Music is a part of the life of the listener as well as the performer and works its magic on him, too.

Last month I went to a dinner club in New York. Five musicians gave us an hour of fine jazz after dinner. In addition to a young woman playing the tuba, there were a trombonist, a drummer, a pianist and a bespectacled, slender man playing the clarinet. His name is Woody Allen, and every Monday night he sits in with this band for a musical evening. Age is irrelevant. The subject is music. The language is universal.

Opening lead — three of spades.

There are players who, when you start to talk about percentages, are ready to grab their hats and run. The odd part of this is that most of these very same players make use of probabilities all the time — and probability is simply a different way of saying percentage.

A bid is generally selected because it is probably the best bid to make; a play is generally selected because it is probably the best play to make. The very word — probability — implies that the probability may not mature. If a particular event is sure to occur, it is called a certainly, not a probability.

A player anxious to win will do best in the long run if he regularly makes the "percentage" bid or play. This deal shows how percentages are applied to a particular problem. West leads a spade, won by declarer with the ten. If South makes the mistake of trying to establish his longest suit, clubs, he goes down. When East wins the first club lead, he returns a spade — which West, of course, refuses to win. Declarer is then in a hopeless position.

The proper suit to attack is hearts! South is looking at seven tricks and has an eighth one readily establishable in spades. He can make a ninth trick much more easily by taking two finesses in hearts (where only the K-Q are missing) than by attacking clubs (where the K-Q-10 are missing).

The odds are about 3 to 1 that East was dealt at least one heart honor, whereas the odds of finding the missing club honors favorably dividend are considerably considerably less than even.

Hence, the proper method of play is to attack hearts rather than clubs. Declarer enters dummy at trick two with a heart finesse. He later takes another heart finesse, thus making the contract.

Bluebonnet call today to assure NU of bowl date

By Randy York
Staff Sports Writer

Regardless of Saturday's college football developments, idle Nebraska appears in line to land an attractive bowl bid, Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne indicated Friday.

Osborne expects a phone call Saturday from Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl officials. He's assuming they'll extend a bid, even if Nebraska is still in the running for the Orange Bowl.

So, Osborne reasoned, Nebraska's football team can expect to spend New Year's Eve in Houston's Astrodome at the very least.

If Iowa State upends Oklahoma State Saturday in Stillwater, that should become instant fact. If the Cowboys defeat the Cyclones, Nebraska fans can still cross their fingers for a win over Oklahoma next week and the sunny beaches of Miami, Jan. 1.

"We have no formal confirmation," Osborne said Friday, "but we expect the Bluebonnet Bowl people to extend us an invitation Saturday under any circumstance."

"Of course," he added, "I would prefer we wind up in the Orange Bowl if I were able to choose. But right now, we're not in a position to choose."

Nebraska, apparently, isn't in a position to get shut out either. The Astro-Bluebonnet will invite Nebraska to oppose the loser of Saturday's Houston (6-2) at Texas Tech (8-0) game. The winner of that Southwest Conference matchup will probably face unbeaten Maryland in the Cotton Bowl.

When the Bluebonnet Bowl indicated it would select Nebraska with an either/or clause, the Cornhuskers warmed up to the idea quickly.

The arrangement came when Gator Bowl interest in Nebraska apparently cooled, and Sun Bowl interest arrived too late.

"The Sun Bowl seemed to want us pretty badly, too," Osborne confided, "but we weren't aware of their sentiments until it was too late. They didn't come forward until last night. The Bluebonnet contacted us Wednesday."

"I guess the Sun Bowl assumed it could wait for the Big Eight to clear itself up," Osborne said. "They called when they sensed things were slipping."

The Sun Bowl, Jan. 2 at El Paso, Tex., still may wind up with a Big Eight representative against Texas A&M.

Osborne said Liberty Bowl officials also had been in contact with Nebraska before the decision was reached to accept the Bluebonnet bid.

Gator officials, originally hot in pursuit of Nebraska for their Dec. 27 bowl against Notre Dame at Jacksonville, Fla., switched gears in their thinking.

One report indicated Gator Bowl officials worried that fans might not follow Nebraska as well as usual because of the mass migration to Hawaii, the Cornhuskers' final regular season game on Dec. 4.

A Nebraska loss to Oklahoma, they reasoned, would add more apathy to that potential.

"All bowls have positive features," Osborne noted. "The Bluebonnet looked especially good to us because of the date. Playing the 31st is much better than unpacking your bags from Hawaii and getting ready to play 10 days later in a bowl game."

The Astro-Bluebonnet has lost its national ABC television contract, according to Nebraska athletic director Bob Devaney. But, he added, TVS will continue to keep the 18-year-old bowl on solid financial footing.

Even though Osborne lifted the cloak of secrecy in Lincoln, Bluebonnet officials remained officially non-committal.

"We're sitting on pins and needles right now," Bluebonnet selection committee chairman Weldon Humble said in an Associated Press story. "We'll sit back and wait for the Big Eight situation to clear itself up."

Iowa State (8-2), Colorado (7-3) or Missouri (6-4) also are in the running for the Bluebonnet bid, should Nebraska qualify for the Orange Bowl.

Iowa State, OSU in strange place

Stillwater, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State and Iowa State will be in a strange position Saturday when they tangle for a share of the Big Eight Conference championship, no longer the exclusive property of Oklahoma and Nebraska.

Both Iowa State and Oklahoma State stand 4-2 in the Big Eight, tied for the league lead with Colorado, Nebraska and Oklahoma. The Cyclones, 8-2 overall, are coming off their biggest win ever—a 37-28 decision over Nebraska. The Cowboys are 6-3 and already assured of its fifth straight winning season—four under Coach Jim Stanley.

Much of the Pokes' success has been due to the feats of record-breaking running back Terry Miller, while the Cyclones have been riding high on an explosive offense and a vastly improved defense.

A possible Orange Bowl berth could be on the line—but who wins a trip to Miami won't be determined until after the Nov. 28 Oklahoma-Nebraska game.

"It's a great chance for both teams and should be a real donkeybuck," Stanley says.

If the Cyclones win, they could go to Miami if Nebraska beats Oklahoma. Under a complicated formula, the Pokes' chances are more remote as they must win Saturday and rely on a Kansas State upset of Colorado, plus a Nebraska win over the Sooners.

Despite its stunning triumph over the Cornhuskers, Iowa State is rated as a three-point underdog. It will be minus one half of its talented quarterback tandem as Wayne Stanley is injured. But Buddy Hardeman has started often since his freshman year, when he led the Cyclones past O-State, 28-12.

The game is likely to be a tight fit—if past history is any indication. O-State leads the series, 9-7-1, but won only 14-7 last year and 14-12 in 1974.

"Iowa State is a super team and Earle Bruce has done a terrific job this year," Cowboy Coach Jim Stanley says. "Luther Blue (wide receiver) is just unreal with all of his ability and speed. Buddy Hardeman—well, we remember him when he killed us three years ago. He runs as good as any quarterback in the country."

Stanley calls running back Dexter Green and tight end Allen Dixon "as good as any around," adding the Cyclone defense "just squeezes the blood out of you."

Bruce is equally impressed with the Cowboys. "They have one of the best, if not the best, running backs in the country in Terry Miller. Derrel Gofourth is an exceptional center and Philip Dokes is a proven defensive tackle."

"The best compliment I can give them is that they are 4-2 in the Big Eight and playing for a share of the championship. They have an outstanding squad," Bruce said.

Texas Tech, Houston aim to make history

United Press International

It's time for a little bit of history and both the Texas Tech Red Raiders and Houston Cougars want to be the team that makes it.

There is little doubt that a team that has never won the Southwest conference championship before is going to win it this year. But which one?

Texas Tech, unbeaten in eight games and ranked No. 5, often has threatened but never has won the SWC title since it entered the league in 1960. And 13th-ranked Houston is trying to win the crown in its first conference campaign.

Those two teams tangle Saturday before a regional television audience and a typically frenzied full house at Lubbock's Jones stadium.

If Houston wins the Cougars would need only to beat Rice next week to ensure a conference title tie and a trip to the Cotton Bowl against—in all likelihood—the undefeated Maryland Terrapins.

But if Texas Tech wins, and the Raiders are a six-point favorite, it would have only to win one of its last two games to secure the conference's top season-ending reward.

"We can win if we play like we've played all season," said Houston's standout offensive guard Val Beicher. "But we don't dare miss any assignments."

The Tech-Houston game could be ultra close and both coaches—Houston's Bill Yeoman and Tech's Steve Sloan—have harped on the necessity of avoiding error this week. A conservative affair would not be surprising.

Houston's leap into the title picture this year has been remarkable because the Cougars posted a 2-9 record last season. Yeoman has been saying for the past few years that his players had better be ready for a battle every week when they began playing conference games because they did not really understand how intense the rivalry was in the SWC.

The Houston players, however, obviously understand perfectly.

"We have displayed great enthusiasm this year," Yeoman said. "I think we will show some more on Saturday."

"We've got to realize how important this game is to us," said Cougars' running back Alois Blackwell, who put a spark in Houston's offense early in the conference season. "I'm sure Tech realized how important it is to them."

Celtics hand Nuggets second loss, 112-108

Boston (UPI) — Charlie Scott scored 22 points and backcourt mate Jo Jo White netted 21 Friday night in routing the Boston Celtics past the Denver Nuggets 112-108.

The loss was just the second in 12 games this season for the new NBA powerhouse.

Six Celtics finished in double figures. Captain John Havlicek, tying Hal Greer for the NBA iron man record of 1,132 NBA games, had 18 points. Sidney Wicks 13, Tom Bowen 11 and Curtis Rowe 10.

Center Dan Issel led the Nuggets with 20 points while David Thompson had 21 of his 30 points in the second half to keep Denver in the contest.

Potter's Killham tops volleyball state voting

Sunday Journal and Star

By Chuck Sinclair
Prep Sports Writer

When people comment to Potter Killham, Bill Hicks about how much natural athletic ability Joni Killham must have, he just smiles.

Killham, after leading Potter to its second straight Class D state volleyball championship, was the leading player in balloting by the state's coaches for Sunday Journal and Star Super State volleyball honors.

Encompassing all classes, Killham's selection made her one of two repeaters for the first team honor along with Lincoln High's Deb Van Dusen.

That's why Hicks smiles when he hears people talk about "natural ability."

"Sure, she's got athletic ability," Hicks says. "But if there ever was a self-made athlete, Joni falls into that category. She's been so dedicated to volleyball for so many years that she's just built herself into one of the best."

While Hicks has spent all 10 of his years since graduating from Chadron State at Potter, he's watched the progress of Killham through the junior and senior high level of competition.

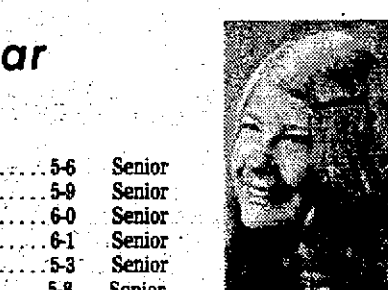

Since seventh-grade, her volleyball teams have won 85 of 89 matches in the six year span. During that same period, those teams have won 18 various tournament championships including three consecutive district and regional titles, and the two state titles.

Last year Killham was also the leading recipient of votes for Super State honors, despite playing most of the time as a server.

"She is a very versatile and well-balanced player," Hicks says. "Outstanding in all areas of the game."

"Last year we had Charlene Obendorfer in our No. 1 spiking position, so Joni started serving in our 4-2 lineup," he adds. "Most of the time, she never made it to the front line. The games were already over."

While doing the bulk of the serving for Potter last year, Killham strung 30 straight serves at one time, 27 of them unreturnable.

With that in mind, Hicks started her in serving position for Potter's first game this year against Dix.

"I figured she would really dominate the way she can serve," Hicks says. "She never made it to the front line in the first game... but we lost it."

During the 19-1 season, Potter lost just four games in all the matches.

"When we lost the game, we started her in the front line and won the next two games something like 15-8, 15-6," he says. "I know in my 10 years of coaching, I've never coached a better player and I've had some good ones."

Hicks says that Killham would like to continue her playing on a collegiate level, possibly at the University of Nebraska.

"I think she can compete anywhere," he says. "Even out West where the volleyball is supposed to be the best you can find."

While Killham drew raves from her performance at the state tournament in Scottsbluff, Beatrice's Lori Melcher probably received an equal amount of praise considering she didn't get the statewide exposure.

Melcher was the second leading vote-receiver for Super State honors.

"She's the best I've ever been around," says Beatrice coach Vicki Ossenkop. "She can do just about everything for you."

Melcher's strongest support came from the Lincoln area coaches, most naming her as the best player they've seen.

One other Class A player, North Platte's Mindy Martens received Super State first team honors while Kris Stewart of Class B champion Lexington and Palmyra's Julie Vollertsen also were placed on the first team.

Beatrice's Lori Melcher (12) gets ready to send the volleyball back to East's Barb Hart. Melcher was named to the first team super state spike team, while Hart was named to the second team. Both were tabbed Class A all-stars.

Osborne confirms he sent clips to Texas' Royal

By Ken Hambleton
Staff Sports Writer

Nebraska head football coach Tom Osborne confirmed a report Friday that he had been contacted by Texas coach Darrell Royal about obtaining game films depicting "unethical defensive tactics" by Oklahoma football players.

A Friday morning story in the Oklahoma Journal said Royal had contacted Nebraska coach Osborne and Kansas coach Bud Moore concerning the deliberate teaching of "clothesline tackling" a term which describes an arm tackle of great force, usually around the opponent's neck.

"Royal called me and asked for some films," Osborne said Friday following the Huskers' two-hour scrimmage workout in preparation for next Friday's game with OU. "I sent him some film clips and frankly there was an instance or two where clothesline tackling was used. One time specifically when Jerry Anderson (Sooner defensive back) knocked out Curtis Craig (NU wingback) following an Oklahoma interception last year."

"Royal is concerned with OU's tackling practices over the past two or three years, but I don't think we've had any real problems in that area with Oklahoma," said Osborne.

"I'm sure that some people could collect film clips on us and show that we're dirty even though we aren't," the NU coach added. "This thing is strictly between Royal and Switzer (OU coach Barry). It's just unfortunate that this wrangling gets so much publicity."

"My understanding is that there were some instances in the Sooner-Texas game that caused Royal's concern," said Osborne. OU linebacker Daryl Hunt was ejected from that game when an official said he had used a clothesline tackle at the sideline.

"I'm concerned with that type of tactic," the Oklahoma Journal quoted Royal. "It's extremely dangerous and I'm not thinking of our players only but of players at all schools. I'm interested in getting something done with the NCAA rules committee."

Friday's scrimmage concentrated on Nebraska's running game with both the first and second teams using strictly ground plays.

Osborne said that the last two games have not been satisfactory in terms of a running game. "I don't exactly know what the problem is. You don't know whether to credit our opponent or our offense."

"Oklahoma State and Iowa State played inspired defensive games against us and even though our pass blocking was tremendous we didn't blow anybody off the line," said Osborne. "Another part of the problem is that we have not been getting the number of rushing attempts we usually get. Typically we rush 40-some times and in those two games we rushed about 30 times."

"Sometimes when you don't have the ball that much you start pressing and you can't establish a running pattern," Osborne said. "We didn't control the line of scrimmage against ISU because we have not been coming off the ball well. And part of that may be due to all the injuries our backs have had."

The Huskers will go through a light workout Saturday morning and then monitor the OSU-ISU game broadcast. Sunday the NU team will take off before final preparations for Friday's game.

In Norman, Okla., the Sooners finished three days of workouts after taking three days off following last week's game. "We haven't worked that hard this week and that may be one of the reasons workouts have had so much snap," said coach Switzer.

Switzer also commented that he has no fears that the Sooners will peak too soon. "We've just been working on basics and haven't started our mental preparation yet. If we had been going hard all this time and hadn't taken time off it might be different," he said.

Indians grab ex-Oriole

Providence, R.I. (UPI) — Wayne Garland, a 20-game winner for the Baltimore Orioles last season after being converted from a relief pitcher into a starter, Friday signed a multi-year contract with the Cleveland Indians.

The 26-year-old right-hander, the Indians' first round pick in the re-entry draft of free agents, posted a 20-7 record and a 2.88 earned run average for the Orioles in 1975 and his acquisition gives the Indians one of the more formidable pitching staffs in the American league.

"Garland is one of the finest pitchers in baseball," said a beaming Phil Seghi, general manager of the Indians. "I think we now have shown baseball, and in particular, our fans in Cleveland that we are dedicated to bringing up a championship team."

Bowls will begin to take shape

United Press International

The annual bowl parade begins to take form Saturday when the football season concludes for most of the nation's colleges, but there will be some prominent names missing this year from the list of invitees to the four major post-season contests.

Most of the pairings for the 12 NCAA sanctioned bowl games will be determined this weekend, and among the more crucial contests on the schedule are Michigan-Ohio State for the Big Ten championship, UCLA-Southern California for the Pacific Eight crown and Texas Tech-Houston for the Southwest Conference title.

The winners of those three contests automatically advance to a major bowl game, with the Big Ten and Pac Eight champions receiving berths in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif., on Jan. 1, and the SWC kingpin serving as the host team in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas, also on New Year's Day.

Three of the four major bowls will be filled Saturday. Besides the Rose Bowl, the Sugar Bowl will complete its field by naming top-ranked Pittsburgh to meet sixth-ranked Georgia, the Southeastern Conference champion, at New Orleans on Jan. 1 and the Cotton Bowl will select seventh-ranked Maryland to oppose the SWC champion.

Only half of the Orange Bowl field will be determined, however. The Big Eight champion receives an automatic bid to the Orange Bowl, but that conference is embroiled in a five-way tie and the conference representative won't be determined until Nebraska meets Oklahoma on Friday, Nov. 26. Iowa State, Colorado and Nebraska all have a shot at getting the bid.

The other club in the Orange Bowl is most likely to be the runnerup in the Pacific Eight Conference. The second place finisher in the Big Ten and Notre Dame also are under consideration, but the two Pac Eight clubs are ranked higher than either of the Big Ten teams, or Notre Dame.

"I think there have been some dealing going on and I think you're going to see Southern California or UCLA in the Orange Bowl," said Don Canham, athletic director at Michigan. "The Orange Bowl would like to take some of the Rose Bowl television audience. Since they won't have an unbeaten team, they need some glamor so they'll probably go for the Pacific Eight runnerup."

Canham doubts the Big Ten runnerup will go to any of the "lesser" bowls. "You have to commit yourself before the game, and neither Michigan nor Ohio State is willing to do that," said Canham. "If it's a decisive win by either team, the other is likely to say, 'the Hell with it.' It depends on how the game breaks."

Other prominent teams who will be missing from the major bowl picture for the first time in several years are Oklahoma, Alabama and Penn State.

At least five, and possibly six, of the bowl participants will come from the Big Eight Conference. Nebraska, Oklahoma, Colorado, Iowa State and Oklahoma State appear to be definite bowl participants.

Brewers get Sal Bando

Milwaukee (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers took their first major step toward shedding a rag-tag image Friday by signing four-time All-Star third baseman Sal Bando, a move which club officials predicted would lead to sweeping changes. "It's a little early, but all I can say is quite obviously this is the first of what will be multiple changes that we expect will make our club extremely competitive," General Manager Jim Baumer said. "Sal is not a panacea for all our ills, but he certainly is a step in the right direction."

Bando, 32, who averaged 33 runs batted in for his nine full seasons with the Oakland A's, said he made his decision to sign with the Brewers at 3:30 a.m. Friday. The decision culminated a series of lengthy meetings.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE - Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
